Landon Calls Chief Aides Together Today to Develop Campaign For Presidency

"TIME HAS COME TO STOP FUMBLING!"

GOVERNOR ALF M. LANDON

Kansas Governor, Following Acceptance Speech, Launches Upon Problems of Issues and Itineraries for Speakers.

CROWD ENTHUSED

At Washington is Heard Republican Praise, and Democratic Scoffing of "Clap-trap."

Topeka, Kas., July 24 (AP)—Gov. Alf M. Landon summoned his chief aides today to develop in detail his strategy for battling what he calls the New Deal "record" in a presidential campaign "to restore our government to an efficient as well as constitutional basis."

John D. M. Hamilton, the national chairman, fresh from an eastern swing and conferences with anti-Roosevelt Democrats, was called to the governor's desk.

In turn, visiting republican chieftains, national committeemen and state chairmen, anticipated a personal chat with their presidential candidate.

Topping the urgent problems was the itinerary of campaign tours for Landon, his running mate, Colonel Frank Knox of Illinois and Hamilton.

One possible guidepost was the nation's reaction to the speech in which Landon formally accepted the unanimous nomination of his party's national convention.

Speaks to Vast Throng

He told a vast throng which blotted out the south lawn of the 16-acre capitol square for "notification night" that "the time has come to stop this fumbling with recovery" and "to restore and to maintain a free competitive system—a system under which, and only under which, can there be independence, equality of opportunity and work for all."

The crowd appeared with the 48-year-old Kansas executive from the start. Again and again he was interrupted by applause. A demonstration of shouting, flag-waving and band playing lasted nearly 10 minutes when he stepped forward to speak.

"Shall we continue to delegate more and more power to the Chief Executive." "No, no, no," shouted the crowd in one of the most enthusiastic outbursts of the evening.

"Or do we desire to preserve the American form of government?" Landon continued.

"Yes, yes, yes," came back the roar.

Once started on his 4,000 word address, Landon read in a serious, intent tone. He used no gestures, but now and then nodded his head and clipped words for special emphasis. Not until he had concluded did he smile and wave again as he had when he walked onto the platform.

Near sat Mrs. Landon and the governor's 79-year-old father, who kept a pretty steady gaze on his son. Peggy Anne Landon, 19-year-old daughter, had an eye for the crowd and the press boxes.

Hamilton Opens Ceremony

Hamilton opened the formal ceremony which climaxed a day of exceptional pageantry Brigadier General Milton R. McLean, Kansas adjutant general, estimated a two hour parade drew 120,000 persons onto Topeka's avenues, brilliant with banners, sunflowers and bunting.

The Republican chairman introduced Rep. Bertrand Snell of New York on this "happy and auspicious occasion."

The permanent chairman of the Cleveland convention then delivered the traditional notification speech, telling Landon "America will see you through to victory."

On recovery and relief, the Republican nominee said: "The time has come to unshackle initiative and free the spirit of American enterprise. We must be free from incessant governmental intimidation and hostility* * from private monopolistic control." * * "Those who need relief will get it."

Debts and taxes: "Crushing debts and taxes" * "invariably retard prosperity." * "Our party holds nothing to be of more urgent importance than putting our financial house in order."

Farm policy: "The administration, through its program of scarcity, has gambled with the needed food and feed supplies of the country * * "We shall establish effective soil conservation and erosion control policies * * We propose to pay cash benefits

Equal Rights of Labor

Labor: "An employe has an equal right to join a union or to refuse to join a union * * "Under all circumstances" * "to be free from interference from any source."

International relations "We shall join no plan that would take from us" * "independence of judgment * * "that might involve us in a war."

Constitution "It is not my belief that the Constitution is above change" * * "But the changes must come by and through the people and not by usurpation."

Among the reports which Hamilton brought back to his chief were the results of conferences with Alfred E. Smith and former Governor

Landon in Acceptance Scores Dole Fallacy of "Support in Idleness"

Following is the text of the address of Governor Landon in accepting the Republican nomination for President:

Mr. Chairman, Members of the Notification Committee, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I accept the nomination of the Republican party for the Presidency of the United States. In accepting this leadership I pray for divine guidance to make me worthy of the faith and the confidence which you have shown in me

This call, coming to one whose life has been that of the every-day American, is proof of that freedom of opportunity which belongs to the people under our government It carries with it both an honor and a responsibility. In a republic these cannot be separated

Tonight, facing this honor and responsibility, I hope for the gift of simple and straightforward speech. I want every man and woman in this nation to understand my every word, for I speak of issues deeply concerning us all.

The citizen who assumes the direction of the executive branch of our government takes an oath that he will "faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will," to the best of his ability, "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States." This oath carries the obligation so to use executive power that it will fulfill the purposes for which it was delegated.

No man, in common good faith to his fellow-citizens, may rightfully assume the duties of the high office of Chief Executive and take the oath that goes with the office unless he shall intend to keep and shall keep his oath inviolate.

It is with a full understanding of the meaning of this oath that I accept this nomination

The 1936 platform of the Republican party has my complete adherence It sets out the principles by which we can achieve the full national life that our resources entitle us to enjoy.

There is not time to lay our whole program before you tonight; I can touch only upon a few phases of it. The others I hope to discuss with you in detail as the campaign progresses.

I intend to approach the issues fairly, as I see them, without rancor or passion If we are to go forward permanently, it must be with a united nation—not with a people torn by appeals to prejudice and divided by class feeling

The time has come to pull together.

No people can make headway where great numbers are supported in idleness There is no future on the relief rolls The law of this world is that men shall eat bread in the sweat of his brow The whole American people want to work at full time and at full pay They want homes and a chance for their children, reasonable security, and the right to live according to American standards They want to share in a steady progress We bind ourselves with a pledge we shall not ignore, thrust aside or forget, to devote our whole energy to bringing these things about.

The world has tried to conquer

Dutchess Republicans Endorse Bleakley for Gubernatorial Race

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 24 (AP).—Taking the lead in the Bleakley for governor movement, Dutchess county's Republican committee unanimously endorsed Justice William F. Bleakley of Yonkers as the Republican candidate last night.

The Bleakley movement had its inception at the Republican national convention where Dutchess, in conjunction with representatives of the other counties in the ninth judicial district, formed a district five-county union with a view of exercising greater influence at the state convention.

The Bleakley resolution adopted here set forth that the justice "has demonstrated his outstanding qualifications as a candidate to the high office of governor of the state of New York."

The resolution presented by the executive committee was seconded by Mrs. W. Arthur Saltford, county vice chairman, and William D. Howell leader in the town of Poughkeepsie.

In a speech later in the program, Rep. Hamilton Fish, Jr., said he was "glad your county has seen fit to endorse Judge Bleakley" and predicted that when the Putnam county committee meets next Saturday it will also give its endorsement.

"In the past the ninth judicial district has not played an important part in New York state," Fish said "The reason was because it had not been united and the result was that cities like Syracuse wielded far greater power.

"Justice Bleakley is a brilliant speaker and highly popular Get behind him and nominate him at the state convention and elect the first Republican governor of the state in 16 years."

The resolution set forth that "the Dutchess county Republican committee believes that the people of the state demand the nomination of a man for the office of governor well equipped by experience with the problems now confronting the people of the state and capable of commanding the respect of all persons

"Hon William F Bleakley has, by reason of his untiring efforts and devotion to duty, demonstrated his ability not only as a jurist of the highest ideals, but as an executive in the administration of the affairs of municipalities in his community and has demonstrated his outstanding qualifications as a candidate to the high office of governor ***.

"The candidacy of Hon William F. Bleakly for the office of governor  is hereby endorsed and the delegates and alternates of the Republican party to be elected at the primary are requested to use their good offices in the advancement of the candidacy of Judge Bleakley."

Ulster Republicans To Hold Picnic, Rally At Tillson Lake August 15

Senator George R. Fearon, Outstanding Candidate for Nomination for Governor, Will be the Principal Speaker.

SPORTS EVENTS

Program Will Include Soft Ball, Water Sports and Other Features to Entertain Crowd.

One of the early indications that the Republicans of Ulster county will enter the coming presidential campaign with an earnestness comparable only with the red hot election battles of many years ago is seen in the announcement of a coming all-day county-wide rally and picnic which is expected to eclipse anything of the kind ever held in Ulster county.

Plans for the big gathering have been under consideration for some time past and those in charge state that widespread interest and enthusiasm is being shown wherever the subject is broached.

Tillson Lake, a well known resort lying between New Paltz and Gardiner, not far from the Bruyn estate, has been selected as the site for the meeting of the Republican clans of the county and Saturday, August 15, has been named as the date.

It will be a basket picnic. There will be no charge to those attending, who will find much to interest them at the lake, outside of the prominent speakers who will be present and the many sports and athletic events which are being arranged by the committee.

Senator Fearon To Speak

Senator George R. Fearon, outstanding candidate for the nomination for governor, will be the principal speaker of the day. Another well known speaker will be Walter Mahoney, president of the Young Republicans of New York state.

A softball game is planned, featuring a contest between the younger and older members of the party. The sponsors, however, are emphasizing the fact that this is the only place where there is anything in the nature of a contest between the different generations, adding that the Republicans of the county are facing the enemy and battling against the "New Deal" with a united front this year and that it is a case of harmony with a big H and everybody putting his shoulder to the wheel.

Track Events, Water Sports

In addition to the softball game it is planned to run off a series of track events, water sports and other features to entertain the thousands of people who will be present during the day.

At least one band will be in attendance to furnish music both morning and afternoon.

Further details of the picnic will be announced later.

Studies Past Events

New London, Conn., July 24 (AP)—Police Sergeant Dennis Cavanaugh started an investigation of past events in the life of 17-year-old Ellen Sullivan today in a further effort to obtain a complete picture of the circumstances surrounding her death. The sergeant, who has been working on the case since the young woman suffered fatal injuries in a plunge from a dance hall window at the end of a Saturday night party, said last night he was investigating the young woman's past as a "new angle" in the tragedy.

Three Men Sought

Syracuse, N. Y., July 24 (AP)—Police, acting on the order of Chief Thomas Carroll, today combed the city for "three men in a gray automobile" who sped past the Remington Rand plant early today as a bomb, hurled near the plant entrance, exploded in Patrolman John E. Hanley's hands, sending him to a hospital seriously injured. The patrolman suffered a compound fracture of the left leg, lost the tip of the great toe on the left foot, suffered burns of hands, arms, and legs, and lacerations of hands and face.

Treasury Receipts

Washington, July 24 (AP).—The position of the treasury July 22: Receipts, $61,250,079.06; expenditures, $42,676,140.64; net balance, $2,-371,732,7[illegible].85; customs receipts for the month, $22,326,837.54. Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $218,772,426.22; expenditures, $2[illegible],176,059.01, including $12,-066,664.35 of emergency expenditures. Excess of expenditures, $69,-712,210.84. Gross debt, $33,491,-299,269.73, an increase of $1,038,-049.00 over the previous day. Gold assets, $10,624,265,688.63.

No Roosevelt Comment

Aboard Schooner Liberty, Yarmouth N. S., July 24 (AP).—President Roosevelt, awaiting favorable weather today before cruising westward to Grand Manan Island on the final lap of his vacation cruise, made no comment on the acceptance speech of Governor Alf M. Landon, his Republican opponent. The President heard the address over the radio last night after he had spent a day in fruitless search for tuna in the lower Bay of Fundy. He was aboard his vacation schooner, Sewanna, again.

U. S. Consulate Aide is Slain With British Subject Trying To Guard Americans in Spain

Embassy Officials at San Sebastian Report to Washington Today That Conditions There Are "Horrible"—Bowers is Cut Off Five Miles From Summer Chancery—At a Point 26 Miles From Madrid Battle Between Fascists and Loyalists For Possession of Capital is Under Way, With 6,000 Defending.

Washington, July 24 (AP)—Aghast at the killing of an American Consulate employe and a British subject endeavoring to protect American lives, 100 citizens of this country sought refuge today aboard a rescue ship which reached Barcelona, Spain.

Simultaneously Embassy officials at San Sebastian reported to the State Department that conditions there were "horrible" and that American Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, at his villa five miles away, still was cut off from his office.

Lynn W. Franklin, American Diplomatic representative at Barcelona, reported that Santiago Iturralde, Spaniard who has "served this consulate faithfully 17 years", and a British subject serving as his chauffeur were shot to death while driving on a mission designed to protect American lives.

The American export line reported to the State Department that the steamer Exeter arrived at Barcelona at 9 a. m (Barcelona time) and that the Master was given a list of 100 Americans and 100 other foreigners who wished to be evacuated

The Master expected to sail for Marseilles, France, this evening.

San Sebastian Torn

From San Sebastian, Hallett Johnson, counselor of the Embassy, reported in a message filed last night:

"The city is without government, conditions are horrible and there have been no communications in or out of the city for three days

"Ambassador Bowers was last heard from at Fuenterrabia. The British and German ambassadors are incommunicado at the Hotel Continental, San Sebastian."

The American Embassy's summer chancery is in the same hotel.

Consular authorities at Bilbao, toward which the battleship Oklahoma is speeding, said the situation there continued threatening.

Since Sunday thousands of troops, especially armed laborers, have gone in motor vehicles to make a stand against the Rebels at Vitoria, they said, adding that the Rebels bombarded them on Tuesday from the air and that a major encounter was imminent.

Consul William E. Chapman at Bilbao was endeavoring to inform all of the 155 Americans there of the expected arrival tonight of the battleship Oklahoma to evacuate them.

Battle for Madrid

Spanish Fascists and loyal Leftist troops battled today 26 miles northwest of Madrid for possession of the capital city.

Renewing an attack blocked yesterday by Liberal artillery, infantry and airplanes, the Fascist armies of Gen. Francisco Franco, rebel leader, fought for control of the Pass of Guadarrama, gateway to Madrid.

Some 6,000 men, bulwarked by the natural protection of the Guadarrama range, defended the pass. Reinforcements of militia and of assault and civil guards were dispatched to their aid during the night.

Reports tended to indicate neither side had gained the advantage.

Diplomatic dispatches received in Paris from Madrid said the rebels apparently were "on top" in Spain.

President Manuel Azana announced that the rebels were "failing".

Spanish Communists in San Sebastian, the summer residence of American Ambassador Claude G. Bowers and other foreign diplomats, threatened to kill 500 Spanish aristocrats unless rebel airplanes ceased bombing the town, said reports received in Irun, Spain.

The city was reported in ruins Ambassador Bowers and his staff were reported to be living in the cellar of a hotel.

Food Shortage

A dispatch from Irun said a food shortage had caused the rationing of all supplies in San Sebastian.

Madrid itself was relatively quiet. The Republican flag waved from public buildings and from headquarters of Leftist organizations The government ordered all demobilized soldiers in Madrid province to report for duty in an attempt to stem the Fascist advance.

Another, and more disconcerting, picture of Madrid was dispatched to the American State department by a secretary of the embassy there. "The situation at Madrid is becoming very serious," he said.

The State Department was advised that an automobile flying the American flag had been fired on and set afire near Barcelona and at least one occupant was killed. The report aroused fears that Santiago Iturralde, a Spanish clerk of the American consulate at Barcelona, had lost his life.

Mrs. Eleanor Jarrett Off Olympic Team for Training Violations

Eleanor Holm Jarrett

Berlin, July 24 (AP)—The decision barring Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett from the American Olympic team for violation of training rules was upheld today by a committee of Olympic officials headed by Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft of Princeton University.

Mrs. Jarrett established herself in one of Berlin's swankiest hotels and immediately sent a cablegram to her husband, announcing her determination to stand her ground. She cabled her husband she intended to make every possible effort to enlist support to regain her place on the team.

Athletes Sign Petition

Berlin, July 24 (AP)—A petition signed by 220 athletes requesting reinstatement of Eleanor Holm Jarrett to the American Olympic team was handed today to Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic Committee.

Hamburg, Germany, July 24 (AP)—The American Olympic committee today granted Eleanor Holm Jarrett's tearful plea for a formal hearing on charges that she had violated training rules but indicated that the decision dropping the great backstroke swimmer from the squad would stand.

Arrangements were made to take Mrs. Jarrett along to Berlin so that members of the committee might listen to her side of the case on the train from Hamburg. Mrs. Jarrett was dropped from the team as the aftermath of a stateroom party yesterday.

Sharply Reprimanded Earlier

Earlier in the voyage the swimmer had been sharply reprimanded by the committee in consequence of an all-night party which started last Friday night. Her escorts on that occasion included Charles McArthur, playwright and husband of Helen Hayes, the actress. Miss Hayes did not attend the party.

The committee, at that time, agreed to give Mrs. Jarrett "one more chance" but placed her on probation.

The swimmer, broken up by the committee's drastic action last night and asking Olympic officials not to "ruin my life," was conceded the opportunity of telling her story by Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft after Avery Brundage, A. O. C. president, flatly had turned down her appeal.

Brundage, turning his attention to welcoming ceremonies, left disposal of the case in the hands of Raycroft, who is vice-president of the committee.

Mrs. Jarrett was dropped from the team just before the Olympic ship Manhattan reached Hamburg. She was ordered to turn in her uniform and equipment and return to America on the Bremen, sailing tomorrow. Her entry in the 100 meters backstroke, in which she was a top-heavy favorite to retain the Olympic title she captured in 1932, was withdrawn.

Given Every Chance

In response to the swimmer's pleading, Brundage said

"We gave you every chance You have only yourself to blame. Now you've got to take it. I appreciate how you feel but you forced our hand and we had no alternative. I can tell you the committee's mind definitely is made up."

"I know I have been drinking too much and I'm all wrong," Mrs Jarrett told Dr. Raycroft. "I can't put into words how badly I feel now. All I am asking is a chance to face

Coughlin Talks To Rome Today, Issues Apology To Roosevelt for Attack

Suggestion is Advanced That Bishop Gallagher May Ask Transfer of Radio Priest to Another Diocese Soon.

STILL AN ENEMY

Priest Agrees to Obey Vatican, Recants on Phrases, Still Out to Beat President.

Vatican City, July 24 (AP)—A trans-Atlantic telephone conversation between Father Charles E Coughlin and Vatican officials aroused speculation today among prelates who acknowledged that the radio priest's "liar" attack on President Roosevelt had created a "painful impression" here.

Whether the conversation, which a reliable source said took place last week, had anything to do with Father Coughlin's subsequent apology and promise to "obey orders" from the Vatican were he silenced, was not disclosed.

(Father Coughlin yesterday made public the text of a public apology for terms he applied to the President at a convention of Townsend old age pension adherents recently, but declared later that he still deemed it best that the President "be supplanted.")

It was suggested in some quarters that Bishop Michael Gallagher, of Detroit, Father Coughlin's superior, might ask Pope Pius to transfer him from his diocese to spare him further embarrassment in the controversy.

Transfer Probable

Prelates, however, expressed the belief that the Holy Father would prefer to transfer the radio priest himself to any action which, by implication, might reflect on the aged bishop.

Any question of transfer or censure, informed Vatican circles said, certainly will arise only after a possible private warning to Father Coughlin and his refusal to heed it.

They said even a Papal admonition to Father Coughlin, should one develop, might be very mild, in view of certain precedent for his activities.

The prelates recalled the case of Don Sturzo, a Sicilian priest who became the crusading leader of the "Partito Popolaire" before the advent of Italian Fascism.

Don Sturzo, one-time mayor of a Sicilian town, attracted such a following that just before the introduction of the Fascist regime his party held 106 seats in the chamber of deputies and was second in strength only to the Socialists.

No Previous Interference

At no time did the Vatican take any action to modify his political activity.

The prelates were said on excellent authority to be awaiting with utmost interest the arrival of Bishop Michael Gallagher of Detroit, Father Coughlin's superior, on the S. S. Rex Saturday.

He will be the key witness in an examination of the radio priest's crusading tactics in the United States, a high American prelate said, adding that Coughlin's recent assertion that President Roosevelt was "a liar" had caused a "painful impression" in the Vatican.

Under the Roman Catholic Church tradition, Bishop Gallagher is the man who should approve or disapprove of Coughlin's participation in the presidential campaign.

Prelates pointed out that instances in which a Pope—who is bishop of Rome—had overruled another bishop in a matter of the latter's diocese were rare.

They said Pope Pius would hear Bishop Gallagher's views on Coughlin's activities before taking any step in the controversy.

Meanwhile, piles of correspondence on the subject are heaped on Vatican desks. Letters of all types have come in to the Vatican from defenders and critics of Father Coughlin.

No Comment Likely

Detroit, July 24 (AP).—Associates of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin said today that he "probably will have no comment whatever to make" regarding reports that a telephone conversation with the Vatican preceded publication of the priest's public apology for having called President Roosevelt a "liar".

They said they did not know whether such a call had been made, and declared that Father Coughlin

Officials May Drain Pond in Michigan

Detroit, July 24 (AP)—Authorities studied today the advisability of draining a pond near Pinckney, Mich., where the body of one alleged Black Legion victim was found, in their search for further evidence against masked and hooded members of the terroristic band.

An assertion attributed to Harvey Davis, Black Legion "colonel," that "that sinkhole could tell plenty if it could talk," spurred them in their search.

Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea said Dayton Dean, confessed Black Legion "executioner," told him of the remark and that James Roy Lorance, one of five, including Davis, who are accused by Dean of the thrill slaying of Silas Coleman, 42-year-old negro hod carrier, corroborated the story.

Coleman's body was found a year ago in the swamp Dean's recent statement offered the first explanation of his death.

Police took Dean to the marsh yesterday. There he pointed out the spots where events in his narrative of the hod carrier's slaying—which he said members of the legion perpetrated "just for the hell of it"—occurred.

Detective Sergeant Jack Harvill of the Detroit police homicide squad, who said he was with Dean continuously, denied a widely circulated report that Dean told officers seven bodies would be found in the lake if it should be drained

GOLD OUTPUT HUGE IN SOUTH AFRICA

Production Reaches Total of Seven Billion Dollars.

Washington.—The role played by the gold-mining industry in the economic life of South Africa is strikingly revealed in a report from Consul Hugh S. Miller, Johannesburg, made public by the Commerce department.

Within a few months, it is pointed out, Johannesburg will celebrate with an empire exposition the fiftieth anniversary of its founding and the founding of the gold mining industry on the Rand At a recent meeting of the Transvaal chamber of mines the retiring president took occasion to review the development of gold-mining in South Africa.

Production of gold in the country, he pointed out, commenced in 1886 and the following year 19,080 fine ounces were produced; five years later, the output had increased until it was slightly over a million ounces; in 1897 it had reached two and a half million ounces; in 1904 more than three and one-half million ounces, and in 1932 11 million ounces. Since 1932 production has declined to 10 million ounces annually. Records indicate that of all the gold produced in the world since the Middle ages, since 1886 about one-quarter has been produced on the Witwatersrand.

According to the president of the chamber, the approximate value of the gold production of the Transvaal from the earliest records to date is about $7,135,000,000 and considerably more than half that amount has been distributed in South Africa.

The city of Johannesburg as a result of the expansion of gold mining in the Transvaal has developed in half a century from a straggling mining camp to a metropolis of 500,000 inhabitants, of whom half are Europeans, according to the report.

Prehistoric Bones Found in Ancient Texas Site

Dallas.—Search for the ruins of an ancient civilization has begun in Rockwall, a little town 25 miles north of Dallas, which was named because of an old wall buried six feet under ground near the city.

If the theory of R. F. Canup, Rockwall business man, is correct, an ancient buried city will be uncovered.

Undismayed by reports from a few geologists that the old wall is the work of nature, Canup declared he would continue his excavations until he finds the bottom of the wall—or the city.

Excavation has been underway for the past three months and has resulted in uncovering a structure to a depth of about eight feet for a distance of 120 feet.

In the open cut along the wall, Canup has found a large collection of fossils, some of which were said to be bones of prehistoric animals.

"Many students of rock formation have told me that no natural formation could be as symmetrical or as consistent in its direction around the town as this wall," Canup said. "Among the geologists who believe that the wall is man-made is Count de Prorok, who visited Rockwall 10 years ago and declared that it is certainly the work of man."

"The fact that the wall turns and makes a square corner leads me to believe that it is man-made masonry," he said, "because nature does not, as a rule, build corners in this fashion."

Python on Hunger Strike Is Fed Forcibly Monthly

St. Louis. — Although Blondie, nineteen-foot python, has been nine years in the St. Louis zoo, it continues to spurn food, and consequently is removed from its inclosed "jungle scene" home once each month and forcibly fed. Removal is accomplished by eight men.

M. J. Lantz, keeper, enters the cage, and flips a towel around the snake's head. He seizes the python behind the jaws and drags it through the cage door. Attendants seize sections of the powerful body and trail after Lantz.

Within thirty seconds Blondie is pinned to the floor—seven attendants on board.

After feeding, the python' teeth are examined and occasionally a little dental work is required. Armed with forceps, cotton and antiseptics, the dentist explores the reptile's upper and lower jaws for loose teeth which pythons try to shed.

Population to Near Peak of 135,000,000 by 1950

Washington. — The slowing down of the growth in population, revealed by the Bureau of the Census, lends credibility to forecasts by government sociologists that population may reach a peak of 135,000,000 persons by 1950, become stationary for a while, and then decline.

The decrease in population growth is attributed chiefly to immigration restrictions. A contributing factor has been the declining birthrate. Births have increased slightly in the last two years, but the increase is regarded as a temporary interruption of a long time down trend.

The population slightly more than doubled between 1850 and 1875 to 127,321,000 estimated as of July 1, 1935, by the Bureau of Census. Currently, the population numbers more than 128,000,000 persons

Germans React Favorably to Speech

Berlin, July 24 (AP)—German aviation and political circles reacted favorably today to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's warning against aerial warfare.

The unexpected frankness of the American aviator in discussing the imminence of war in Europe at a luncheon in his honor yesterday was almost universally praised

Dr Hans H. Dieckhoff, in charge of American affairs at the German foreign office, said he regarded "Lindbergh's" philosophical address as one of the greatest short speeches ever written."

Colonel Lindbergh astonished his luncheon hosts with the assertion that aviation had "abolished what we call defensive warfare" and had turned "defense into attack."

He then added this warning:

"We can no longer protect our families with an army Our libraries, our museums and every one of the institutions we value most are laid bare to bombardments."

"As I travel over Europe," he said, "I am more than ever impressed with the seriousness of the situation which confronts us

"When I see that within a day or two damage can be done which no time can ever replace, I begin to realize that we must look for a new type of security, a security which is dynamic, not static, a security which rests in intelligence, not in forts." "

"Aviation has brought rapid changes to a world already staggering with changes. It is our responsibility to make sure in so doing we don't destroy the very things which we wish to protect."

Later in the day Lindbergh accepted tickets to the opening ceremony of the Olympic games August 1 A place in the honor box beside Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler has been reserved for him.

Greenland Covered With 1,000-Ft. Blanket of Ice

Greenland is covered with a blanket of solid ice over 1,000 ft. thick and is the largest island in the world. Australia, of course, is excepted, being classed as a continent, notes a writer in Tid-Bits Magazine.

Greenland is inhabited by about 400 whites and 13,000 Eskimos, and is controlled by Denmark. It is twenty-five times as large as Ireland, its area being about 827,300 square miles. No foreigner can live on the island or trade in the country without special permission from the authorities.

Greenland was originally discovered by a Norseman in the latter part of the tenth century; he settled in the extreme south portion. The colonists vanished, however, and their fate is one of the mysteries of history.

The vast ice-cap which covers the island except for a narrow fringe at the edge of the surrounding sea has a central dividing crest from five to nine thousand feet high, while here and there ice-free mountain peaks burst through their frigid armor and lift their heads towards the heavens, some eight or nine thousand feet above sea level. Vast ice streams, which form gigantic icebergs, flow continuously from the inland ice into adjacent seas, largely through fiords of which Greenland has the most extensive and most remarkable system in the world.

Merchants of Old Good at Figuring, Tablets Reveal

Babylonian merchants more than 4,000 years ago knew enough about simple and compound interest to charge their customers rates as high as 20 per cent per year, according to ancient clay tablets which once were Babylonian textbooks of arithmetic and algebra are deposited in libraries at Berlin and at Yale University.

Unlike modern textbooks of these mathematical sciences, the Babylonian documents do not describe general principles of calculation. Instead they resemble modern devices such as the multiplication table or tables of fractions.

This is one reason why the abilities of the ancient Babylonian mathematicians and bookkeepers were not realized by students of the tablets until an authority discovered what they really meant.

Another difference between Babylonian and modern mathematics is that the Babylonians did not count by tens, but by sixties. Numbers larger than 60 were expressed in powers of that number, such as squares or cubes. Numbers smaller than 60 were expressed in fractions of 60—one-half, one-third, and so on.

RUN OVER

The experience of Charles E. Harvey of Omaha, car checker for a railroad company, looks like a rare combination of luck and common sense. Harvey stumbled and fell in front of a train and was run over by a locomotive and 61 cars. When he saw he could not get out of the way, he quickly edged over until he lay flat just inside of one rail, his face downward and his arms and legs stretched out. He hardly hoped to escape. Some of the brake riggings on the cars were low enough to rake him painfully as they passed, and much of his clothing was torn off, but he will recover from his bruises and lacerations.

His experience may be useful to others caught in the same predicament, if they can keep their presence of mind as he did. But it raises the question why modern construction of railroad locomotives and cars makes no allowance for the escape of people who may fall under trains. Doubtless there are advantages in putting the center of gravity as low as possible, but need it be so low as it is? The same consideration is coming to apply to automobiles. Their bodies are slung lower and lower, until pedestrians falling under them have little chance of escaping serious injury.

PROLETARIAT.

With business almost back to normal, according to the usual statistical standards, the relief problem continues great and menacing. The other day at the Pennsylvania statehouse in Harrisburg the legislature was deadlocked over a relief appropriation. Jobless men and women crowded the galleries and booed the lawmakers. The big argument was over the size of the appropriation, the Democrats proposing $55,000,000 and the Republicans $35,000,000, and it was ended by a compromise of $45,000,000. That sum is expected to last only till next January.

The size of the appropriation and the psychology of the spectators were equally interesting. The jobless spectators announced that unless they got assurance of further relief they would "take over the Capitol." In view of what happened in the New Jersey statehouse last winter, that rash threat may have seemed to many a legislator more than idle words. The only practical remedy for ruinous continuance of public relief is private employment on a far bigger scale. Public and private effort will have to concentrate on that, to avoid a permanent proletariat in this country supported out of the public treasury.

LESS JUNKETING

Congress showed considerable restraint at the close of the last session. It appropriated only $5,000 for junketing purposes. Often there are a good many places seeming to require congressional observation and inspection during vacation. Last summer, for example, many congressmen went to the inaugural ceremonies in the Philippines, taking interesting side glimpses along the way in Japan, China and other places.

The $5,000 junket is a little tour to investigate the steamship service to South America and South Africa. The call of an election campaign may have had something to do with the modest travel plans.

REBELLION IN AFRICA.

Benito Mussolini has been talking very loudly lately, celebrating his double victory—his conquest of Ethiopia and Geneva. Addressing an enthusiastic crowd in Rome on July 15, and alluding to the lifting of the sanctions imposed by the League of Nations for his violation of treaties, he said: "The white flag has been hoisted today on sanctionist heathens. This represents the surrender of those who would deny us victory."

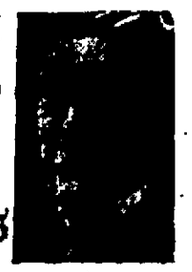

Even while he was gloating, news came to Paris that the supposedly crushed Ethiopians were on the warpath again, that the railroad from Addis Ababa had been cut in various places since July 6, that the Italian garrison at the capital was besieged by bold tribesmen, that Marshal Graziani the Italian viceroy was seriously wounded in a defensive battle, that native troops had recaptured and sacked the important city of Harar, that raids and massacres were reported from various other places. Evidently the war isn't won yet. Unless the Ethiopian has changed his character, it may keep Italy busy yet for some time. That pleases Great Britain and reassures Italy's European neighbors.

RENO MARRIAGES.

The Fourth of July was a memorable day in Reno, Nev., for marriage license clerks, justices of the peace, ministers and even judges. More than 300 Californians who chose Independence Day to get married went to Reno to have the ceremony performed, in order to avoid the three-day wait for licenses required by law in their own state. They kept clerks busy filling out licenses, and judges, justices and ministers tying the knots.

It is an interesting development for the nation's divorce capital to break records with weddings. Reno may earn a pleasanter reputation by this means, provided its divorces don't increase in the same proportion.

That Body of Yours

DIARRHOEA AND COLITIS

I know a chap with as much brains as the rest of us and possessing a good average body, who is never sick and walks a number of miles every day. However he has chronic diarrhoea, has had it for twenty years or more, and nothing seems to have any effect in correcting the condition.

The cause of this chronic diarrhoea is believed to be due to "nerves". In fact some conditions are more serious than diarrhoea and are known as mucous colitis and also the ulcer type of colitis, which is an inflammation of the lower bowel or large intestine.

It used to be said that the inflammation of the lower bowel—the colitis—caused the nervousness, but it is now more generally believed that the nervousness caused the diarrhoea and the colitis. In fact many cases of mucous colitis or ulcerative colitis that were thought to be due to some organic trouble in the bowel itself, are now believed to be due to the nerves entirely and treatment aimed at correcting the nervous condition is bringing about cures.

Dr. A. I. Sullivan, New Haven, in New England Journal of Medicine, Boston, presents observations obtained from various sources on the relationship between the emotions and diarrhoea usually considered as due to some organic trouble.

Dr. Sullivan suggests that if the colon (lower bowel) is substituted for the tear glands in the eye and diarrhoea for weeping or crying an idea will be had of how the problem of correcting this irritation and inflammation of the bowel should be approached. Now there are other causes—real organic or mechanical causes—for colitis, and these must not be overlooked, but the nervous or emotional cause should always be kept in mind as pointed out by Doctors Cannon, Alvarez, and Cushing, names which are familiar to all physicians because of their work on the effect of the emotions on the digestive tract.

The thought then is that proper diet—not much rough food—should be eaten, that search should be made for causes of increased action of the muscles of the lower bowel, that treatment by bland foods and the use of oil or water enemas should be continued, but that the effect of the emotions—continuous tenseness—as a cause of diarrhoea and colitis should be kept in mind and treatment given accordingly.

MURDER TONIGHT

BY LAWRENCE W. MEYNELL

Chapter 27

THE ANSWER

"DEAR INSPECTOR," the Sergeant's letter began, "I am sorry for all the official flapdoodle there will be about this business.

"I don't know whether you are beginning to guess it or not, but I killed Arthur Burdett; an action for which I wasn't sorry at the time, but which I am inclined to regret now.

"Burdett was not only a miser but a roué as well—I had reason to think some time ago that he got various women up to the Court on one pretext or another, but it had nothing to do with me and so I didn't take much notice. But lately he had his eye on my wife; twice he rang her up when he knew I was away and asked her to go up there to take a message for me. I thought, until today, that that was why she went up there, but I know differently now.

"It so happened that the second time she was there (or at any rate the second time I know of) I was on some of his land beyond Nyeton, seeing about a tree that had blown across the road and that had to be cleared away. I called at the Court on my way back and as luck would have it ran into Alice just as she was leaving.

"She looked a bit upset and flushed, and I suppose she was frightened at seeing me there. Anyway when we got home that evening she told me that he had rung her up on an excuse of having some message for me and asked her up, and when she had got there there was no more talk about any message, he ended up by trying to make love to her. I suppose now that she told me all these half-lies because she was thoroughly scared by my turning up there unexpectedly and was afraid that I already knew something.

"I thought it over a day and decided to go up on Monday, when I knew his man would be out, to thrash the whole thing out with him and see where we stood. So as not to worry Alice, I told her I was going out on my usual Nyeton round after poachers.

"Actually I went up to Enderton Court; I used the back drive. I got to the Court at about five minutes to seven, I should think. I knocked on the front door and the old miser came shuffling across the hall just like Lumsdale described. He opened the door as far as the chain would admit and peered out. I said 'I want a word with you Mr. Burdett about a little matter.'

"He hesitated a moment and then took the chain off and told me to come in. I followed him across the hall into that little study sort of place where he always used to sit. We sat down and he croaked out, 'What do you want at this time of night?'

"I asked him straight out what he was doing with my wife.

"HE burst out into the usual torrent of abuse which he used whenever he lost his temper. What the hell did I mean, and how dare I have the bloody impudence, and all that sort of thing.

"Of course I took no notice of that, except perhaps that it made me even angrier than I was already. When he had run short of breath I told him quite quietly that my wife had complained of being decoyed up there under false pretenses and of having been molested, and that unless he had some satisfactory explanation to give I intended to make an official case of it and prosecute him.

"It was then that the whole atmosphere of the thing changed. I didn't speak at all for the next ten minutes, he had it all his own way. He told me, amongst a lot of other things, that if I really imagined my wife went up there unwillingly it was about the richest thing he had ever heard of; that his great difficulty had been to keep her away once he had first got her up there; that he knew well enough what I was after, that the whole thing was a plant—that I wanted money.

"I couldn't stand it anyway and when he said that about Alice I lost control of myself (damned fool that I was). I had my truncheon out before I knew what I was doing. When he had said what he did about Alice he leaned across the table and spat at me. I had my hand on my truncheon as I've told you and when he leaned forward and opened that scrawing mouth of his I hit him without knowing that I did it.

"It killed him at once. I hit him on the head which I didn't mean to do. In a sense you may say that I didn't mean to hit him at all, it all happened quickly and under the stress of temper. However, all those things don't matter. I did hit him and killed him and it was murder.

"I lost my head for a few minutes, and damned nearly turned tail and ran, leaving everything just as it was, but, of course, that soon passed. I knew nobody could have heard anything and I was certain no one had seen me going up the back drive. My truncheon was the first snag. I thought I would provide a weapon to make it easy for everybody.

"Those two Indian Clubs took my eye so I jumped up on a chair and got one down (the second fell down with a hell of a clatter, it made me jump a foot, and I realized how nervy I was).

"When that was finished I put the chair back in its place (the one I had stood on to get the clubs) carefully brushed off any evidence of it having been stood on and had a good look round.

"One club was on the floor and I picked it up and hung it on a nail on the wall. It just shows how mistaken a man can be about the state of his mind and how easy it must be for murderers to make silly mistakes: I could have sworn I was perfectly cool and collected and yet I never realized that I was putting that club back on its wrong nail; it just didn't enter my head.

"HALFWAY down the back drive I did exactly what you thought the murderer did. I stuck my truncheon well into the grass at the foot of the hedge and wiped all the mess off it. Then I slung it in place again and went on. There was no one about so I turned left and made off sharply through the lanes to Nyeton village.

"I was back home by half past eight and sat there pretending to read with my ears nailed to the door as you may say.

"Just after nine Lumsdale knocked, I let him in and he told me his alarming news. I hope my face looked serious and official enough, I tried to make it so anyway, and I walked up with him to see the first murder of my life (but my second view of it).

"I want to make it clear, Inspector, that I didn't want anybody else to be charged with the crime, but I didn't see how there could be any evidence to charge anyone else. I don't pretend to know what I should have done if the circumstantial evidence had gone on mounting against Shipley the way it did.

"However, you feel a damned fool, Inspector, when you've jumped into the river to rescue someone and it turns out to be a dummy. I found out today that what Arthur Burdett said about my wife was absolutely true—so I needn't have killed him at all really, which is a pretty good joke on both of us when you come to think of it.

"Well, Inspector, that's the way of it. I knew it all before; shut my eyes to it and have had it proved abundantly again: Go your own way in life and trust yourself, nothing else is worth while. If you hadn't come in when you did this evening I should have killed Alice. You saved her, and much good that will do the world. I shan't kill her now. I couldn't very well hope to get away with that, and yet if I let her live she'll get me caught over the other thing, somehow or other in the devilish way women have in their minds she knows.

"Well, she won't have that pleasure. I've always lived life my own way and I'll go out of it my own way.

James Clewley White."

Inspector Hylton read this remarkable and eminently lucid document through slowly and with a series of mingled feelings such as he had seldom, if ever, before experienced. When he had finished it to its last syllable he gathered the loose sheets together and took them into the office, not caring particularly to share the company in the kitchen any longer.

"Poor devil" Hylton thought with compassion. Then lifting up the receiver, he asked in a weary voice for the Morechester Police Station.

A Washington Daybook

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—A half year of uncomfortable squirming was dealt out for government department heads by the President's order that they set aside a "kitty" from their appropriations—not to be spent unless "good cause" can be shown next January.

The President agrees there is nothing a department head likes better than to arrive at the middle of the fiscal year with a saving—and then to design some way of spending it before the year runs out, so as to show congress didn't give him too much.

Take the army, for instance. Will it slow down the pace of recruiting up to its newly allowed strength, or purchase fewer planes than congress allowed in that record peace time $572,000,000 appropriation? It may require some such trimming to arrive at the midway point January 1 with a "kitty" satisfactory to the President.

* * *

How To Economize?

WILL the navy department slow down its building schedule or its recruiting, or perhaps eliminate a practice cruise by which its officers maintain efficiency?

Will the justice department trim the size to which G-man Hoover was authorized to expand his bureau of investigation?

Will the department of agriculture chip a little off here and there from its soil erosion payments, its experiment station activities, its game protective work, its food and drug inspection service?

* * *

One Hope Is Left

WHAT Mr. Roosevelt discovered as governor of New York and more recently as President was that department heads allow themselves plenty of leeway in their requests for funds, and can stand a bit of compulsory economy without greatly hampering the performance of their duties.

He left them a little hope, too, in announcing the plan he said any department head who could "show good cause" why the kitty should be spent during the final six months of the year might be permitted to spend it.

OGLERS NO GROUNDS FOR CHINESE DIVORCE

Shanghai, China (AP)—Says Chinese judges here have just ruled that a man has no right to sell or divorce his wife merely because she is ugly.

A Chinese merchant, tired of his wife whom he considered ugly, sold her to a farmer at Yangchow. But the wife, disliking her new husband, succeeded in escaping from him. She traced her first husband and had him arrested for desertion.

Now he must either remarry her or provide for her support. The case is complicated by the fact that the first husband already has taken a second wife.

TALKS TO PARENTS

Premature Flowering

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

From his earliest childhood, Sam showed a marked facility in rhyme and meter. He could speak in verse nearly as easily as in prose, and by the time he started school already had pages of so-called "poetry" to his credit.

His parents, who were lacking in the ability to rhyme, and who had very little sense of rhythm, decided that they had produced a poet. They read Sam's poems to their friends, talked quite openly to them and to the child himself of his "genius," and made every effort to have some of the effusions published. One enterprising publisher finally brought out a small volume of the poems with a story about the child, speaking of him as an infant prodigy.

The praise and publicity were both bad for Sam. He grew conceited and self-conscious, and soon neglected all the ordinary pleasures and duties of childhood to follow the muse of poetry. His poems never grew any better, but remained the products of an unformed mind. In the end, he did not become a poet, nor was he prepared for any work in life.

Hundreds of children write poetry. There is nothing unusual about it. Some of it is even good; most of it is nothing but jingles.

To the adult who has lost the gift of it, if he ever had it, the faculty is a phenomenon, and he is very apt to mistake it for genius and encourage it with flattery. Genius needs no encouragement. Man does not possess genius, genius possesses the man, and nothing that one can say or do will turn it aside from its goal.

Talent, on the other hand, needs training and development, but may easily be spoiled and destroyed by wrong handling. Let the child write, be interested in his work and its progress, give him the benefit of constructive criticism and advice, but protect him from publicity and too early flowering.

Sundown Stories

The Angry Galumps

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"WHAT is the meaning of all this noise?" cried Grandpa Grouchy Galump irritably as he came out of his door.

"I thought those wretched animals were away for a while," said Grandma as she followed Grandpa. "What! They're all here!"

"You think we're wretched, growl, growl, growl. Well, we think you're wretched!" growled the bears with noisy fervor.

"You wanted to trick us, and to trick Willy Nilly, too," bleated Sweet Face.

"You made us stay out in that dreadful storm," cackled Top Notch. "Cock-a-doodle-do, you fooled me, did you? Well, I'll wake you up much earlier these mornings, that's what I'll do."

"You didn't mean to help Willy Nilly at all, bark, bark," barked Rip. "I'll howl some more and you won't like that." And Rip howled again and again.

"Quack, quack, quack, quack" quacked Mr. and Mrs. Quacko Duck. "We'll get even with you."

"Are we quacking all right?" asked the little ducks.

"Your voices could be louder," quacked their parents. This delighted the little ducks and they certainly made more noise than ever.

"Keep quiet, can't you? Stop making all that racket," shouted Grandpa Grouchy Galump. He could not understand what they were saying to him, but it seemed as though their voices would drive him mad before long.

"We won't keep quiet," they answered and crowed and barked and bleated and quacked and growled.

OFFICE CAT

By Junius

Utopia will have been achieved when the kind wife and mother gets as much front page newspaper publicity as the jealous blonde who shoots her lover.

The foreman of an electrican repair shop was recently interviewing a bright boy who was applying for a position:
Foreman—Do you know anything at all about electrical apparatus?
Bright Boy (promptly)—Yes, sir.
Foreman—What is an armature?
Bright Boy—It's a guy who sings for Major Bowes.

There seems to be a sustained impression in the minds of many men that there was litle change until they began to get along in years.

Voice—Al, who was that Democrat I saw you walking down the street with a few days ago?
Al Smith—That was no Democrat; that was Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The reason a lot of people are so quiet is that they say what they think.

Mother—How is it that you always let George kiss you goodnight?
Daughter—On his lap.

Church is th only place in the world one has to get to early in order to get a back seat.

Junior—Mother, Dear, what is a "second-story man"?
Mother—Your father is one. If I don't believe his first story, he always has another ready.

Stars and Stripes Forever

A painter who liver in Great Britain,
Interrupted two girls with their knitain.
He said with a sigh,
"That park bench—well I
Just painted it, right where you're sitain."

The backwoodsman had trudged to the nearest town and applied for employment at a factory:
Foreman—I think I can find you a job all right, but you'll have to work in a night shift.
Backwoodsman—That's too bad, I have only pajamas.

A good way to have a mind at rest is to settle down to earn all you can get instead of taking chances on every lottery that comes along. The gambling fever increases as indulged, so the best way is never to gamble even in a small way.

Wife—Because of the way you spoke to her on the phone this morning, the cook has quit—walked right out on us.
Husband—My gracious, I thought I was talking to you!

Perhaps it would be just as well not to count your chickens until they have returned from scratching up your neighbor's garden.

Film Star (using new toilet preparation)—This is awful stuff. Why did you ever buy it?
Her Maid—I read an advertisement in which you praised it very highly.

Your personality is your display window. Perhaps it needs perking up a bit.

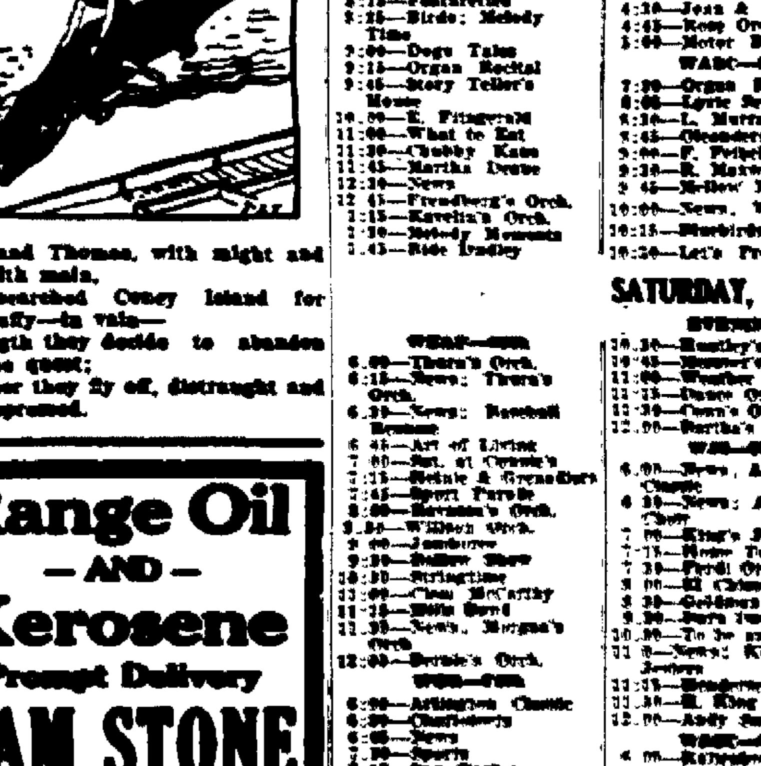

Lady—I want a good cook for my country residence.
Employment Manager — Miss Clark, have we anybody here who would like to spend a day or two in the country?

Too many excuses make for an exemploye. Make few excuses.

Janet—Are you really going with that rich bozo with a view to marriage?
Laura—Sure; just as soon as I get his money I'm going to marry the man I want.

The man who does his level best today always does better tomorrow. The cumulative effect; of steady work and constant saving is a tremendous power in a man's life.

At length they decide to abandon the quest;

JOHN NICHOLS TO SHOW AT SAWKILL GALLERY

Woodstock, July 24—John Nichols, Woodstock artist, is the choice for the third one-man show at the Sawkill Gallery, to open this week-end.

Mr. Nichols received his art training in the Chicago Art Institute, the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, the Art Students League in New York and a year's study in the Louvre Museum in Paris.

His entire life has been a splendid background for his work. A family of painters, a year of school in Vevey, Switzerland, and several years of travel in Europe have combined forces with his formal training for the beginning of the steady development of a mature artist. In spite of his conventional background and training he is somewhat of a rebel against established tradition.

Nichols has exhibited in a number o fplaces, including a one-man show in 1932 sponsored by the Junior League of Denver. His work can be found in several private collections in New York, Denver, Chicago and Woodstock. Among Woodstockers who own paintings by John Nichols are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Penning, Henry Morton Robinson, Arnold Blanch, Russell and Doris Lee.

LONG ISLAND CONTRACTOR BUYS ENNISTS' PROPERTY

Rance Ennist of West Hurley has sold his three acre place located on the Spillway road to Louis Bock, building contractor from Long Island.

This place has been owned by the Ennists for a number of years and for the past five years, since retiring, Mr. Ennist has been the occupant. It was well known by most of the people of Ulster county as it was always attractive and kept in the pink of condition. It was made conspicuous by three large dragons in front of the dwelling which gave a balance to the landscape.

Mr. Bock has taken possession of his new purchase and will make additional improvements to the buildings and construct a large poultry house. The Ennists have moved to Hurley.

The sale was negotiated by Frank S. Hyatt of 277 Fair street and associated broker, George W. Moore.

Robins aren't the only ones of the earth's creatures who love cherries. Who of us doesn't feel a delicious, mouth-watering sense of anticipation when he sees a tree covered with that red and luscious fruit and who doesn't welcome the cherry season as a time of surpassingly good pies, puddings and pastries.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marion Sims

Chapter One

CAROL AT HOME

THE room, usually gay and serene, had today an electric quality, as if its atmosphere were charged with the currents of conflicting desires.

It was a charming room, recently grown shabby, filled with beautiful and unrelated objects that long association had blended into a harmonious whole. Bookshelves climbed the walls beside the fireplace.

The brilliant surface of a Duncan Phyfe secretary reflected a disreputable armchair, cherished for its vitiating comfort; a mellow Sarouk rubbed shoulders with a big taupe rug that had graduated years before from a department store.

The room reflected with uncanny accuracy the temperament of its inhabitants; the mixture of hardness and softness, of weakness and strength, of ugliness and beauty.

It was a hard room to leave, Carol thought as she stood on the hearth and felt it wrapping its tentacles about her. The room had shared half her twenty-six years, and it reminded her of that now, in the treacherous and unsporting fashion of a woman who seeks to hold a familiar and unwilling lover.

It's no use, she told the room harshly; you've served your purpose. You belong to the whole family. I want one like you that belongs to me, and if I stay on here I'll never have it.

"That's just it," said Carol. "Managing is getting me down."

She looked at the family, sitting in characteristic attitudes. Milly, her mother, was upright on the couch, an expression of hurt astonishment in her eyes. She felt desperately sorry for Milly, but she fought back the pity that rushed up and stung her. Milly had lived, and she wouldn't always be here, although that seemed incredible now. She was too plump and pretty and youthful to lend credence to the inevitability of dissolution.

Carol wished fervently that Milly might marry again: she was so intensely feminine, and so avid of male admiration. A pleasant, stupid man this time, without the faceted brilliance that had so bewildered her in Evan Torrance. Evan had adored her as a plaything, knowing within the first year that she could never be anything else to him. Perhaps (Carol tossed the idea as a sop to her own conscience) she might even manage that for Milly after she had made the break herself. . . .

Pat sprawled on his shoulder blades in an armchair, an unlit pipe between his teeth, an unreadable look in his blue eyes. It was Pat who broke Carol's heart, but she knew with the insight Evan had bequeathed her that she couldn't do much for Pat. Nobody could. He was the victim of his own weakness and his own strength.

He had so many capabilities and no driving talent. He did charming water-colors, wrote promising, bitterly clever sketches, had an uncanny feeling for the theatre. And each gift distracted his attention from the others: he was diverted from a set of illustrations by a burning idea for a story, and then somebody would put on a benefit play and persuade him to drop both.

And for a living of sorts he sold motor cars.

Carol tried to tell herself that Pat was only twenty-one, and that he would mature, but she knew better. Pat was a thousand years old in some ways, and an adolescent in others, and he always would be. Pat was His Own Worst Enemy.

THAT left Jill, who was Pat's twin. Nobody, Carol thought gratefully, need waste sympathy on Jill. She knew what she wanted, and she knew that a straight line was usually the shortest distance between two points. (She even knew, Carol thought ruefully, when it wasn't!) She had rejected the sacrificial offer of a year or two at college and taken a business course instead, and now she made a fair salary in Meredith's only prosperous insurance office.

Some time within the next few years a personable and eligible man would cross her path, and Jill, aided by her own rose and gold beauty, would calmly annex him. Until then she liked a little town, she had two or three "boy friends," and she adored her home.

Milly was saying plaintively: "But, Carol, there's no real necessity for you to do it. Your room and meals cost practically nothing. We can manage like we've been doing."

Carol dragged her mind back to the issue. "That's just it: 'managing' is gradually getting me down. If I take this job it means that my clothes and food won't come out of the family exchequer and there'll be that much more for the rest of you. If you and Jill don't mind a stranger in the house you could even rent my room to another teacher who'd be leaving as I came home."

She felt a stab of dishonesty because these were such minor factors; because it was Meredith itself, and not the managing that was gradually getting her down. But she could at least spare Milly that.

"And next summer," she smiled into their glum faces, "my salary will be velvet. One-fourth of twelve hundred is . . . three hundred dollars, my children. We'll take that and go on a beautiful, hell-raisin' bender."

She was passionately glad that Evan Torrance didn't know they were having to "manage." He had died with the reassurance that his family was adequately provided for: he hadn't foreseen a national debauch.

Milly said in an aggrieved voice: "I still don't see why you can't teach in the high school here, instead . . ."

That was like Milly. You explained something very carefully, to her satisfaction and yours, and then, hours or days later, she came back and began worrying the subject again, as if it were a disinterred bone.

"Because I didn't apply for it, love. Because it took this definite offer to push me over the edge. Because I'm the type that sits still and bays at the moon."

"I thought you didn't like teaching," Pat reminded her. "You tried it a year and quit."

"I don't really crave any sort of work," she confessed cheerfully. "I'd much rather be endowed, but not even colleges are having any luck at that now. Teaching's all right; it's just that—as the elevator boy told us about Westminster—it does take it out of you. In these parlous times it pays better than most things—and besides, it's all I can do. That's the beauty of these tony A-grade colleges."

Characteristically, Jill put her finger on the vital point. "What about Ashboro as a place to live? Won't you be swapping the devil for a witch?"

SHE would be, of course. She had visited Ashboro under the pleasantest of circumstances, and even invested with the glamour of strangeness it was still just another Georgia town. Heaven knew what it would be when she was an Out-of-Town Teacher. But—and this too she couldn't tell them—she wanted to use Ashboro as a springboard. It wasn't so hard to stay away as it was to get away.

She nodded at Jill. "I probably will be, but all I can do is try. I can always come home: if I don't watch my step and curb my tongue I'll probably be sent home. Then I'll get a job here next year. They know I'm harmless here, in spite of all my loose talk."

But she knew, looking into her sister's clear eyes, that Jill wasn't fooled. Jill would enter without any instruction into the conspiracy to spare Milly's feelings, but you couldn't fool her. She dug the last cigaret out of a brass box and lit it.

Milly said without conviction: "Jill, you're smoking too much." And then to Carol: "What sort of place is this Ashboro?"

How could you describe Ashboro? Carol wondered. That strange conglomeration of cotton mills and decaying old homes and prosperous bourgeoisie. The hum of machinery was an orchestral accompaniment to the town's very life—or it had been, four years ago. Probably under this new dispensation of Roosevelt's they were at it again, and their whistles—those eerie, inexorable blasts that came at such queer hours—were once more marking off the day and night into shifts. Shorter shifts, this time.

She said slowly: "In most ways it's like Meredith, or any other Georgia town. There must be a dozen cotton mills there, and a few beautiful old homes, and the usual go-getters who have most of the money. Or rather they did have: I don't know how they've fared lately."

"It sounds terrible," Milly said decidedly.

"Of course. And if we described Meredith to them they'd say the same thing in the same tone of voice. Familiarity breeds—well—acceptance."

this depression by different methods. None of them has been fully successful. Too frequently recovery has been hindered, if not defeated, by political considerations.

Our own country has tried one economic theory after another. The present administration asked for, and received, extraordinary powers upon the assurance that these were to be temporary. Most of its proposals did not follow familiar paths to recovery. We knew they were being undertaken hastily and with little deliberation.

Held Bar to Confidence

But because the measures were supposed to be temporary, because everybody hoped they would prove successful, and because the people wanted the administration to have a fair trial, Congress and the country united in support of its efforts at the outset.

Now it becomes our duty to examine the record as it stands. The record shows that these measures did not fit together into any definite program of recovery. Many of them worked at cross-purposes and defeated themselves. Some developed into definite hindrances to recovery. They had the effect generally of extending control by Washington into the remotest corners of the country. The frequent and sudden changes in the administration's policy caused a continual uneasiness.

As a result, recovery has been set back again and again. This was not all of the failure. Practical progressives have suffered the disheartening experience of seeing many liberal objectives discredited during the past three years by careless thinking, unworkable laws and incompetent administration.

The nation has not made the durable progress, either in reform or recovery, that we had the right to expect.

For it must be remembered that the welfare of our people is not recorded on the financial pages of the newspapers. It cannot be measured in stock market prices. The real test is to be found in the ability of the average American to engage in business, to obtain a job, to be a self-supporting and a self-respecting member of his community.

Judged by the things that make us a nation of happy families, the New Deal has fallen far short of success. The proof of this is in the record. The record shows that in 1933 the primary need was jobs for the unemployed. The record shows that in 1936 the primary need still is jobs for the unemployed.

The time has come to stop this fumbling with recovery. American initiative is not a commodity to be delivered in pound packages through a governmental bureau. It is a vital force in the life of our nation and it must be freed!

The country is ripe for recovery.

We are far behind in expenditures for upkeep and improvements and for expansion.

Would Dispel Fear

The total of this demand—in industry, in new enterprises, in our homes and on our farms—amounts to billions of dollars. Once all this consumer demand is released the problem will be not where to find work for the workers but where to find workers for the work.

One of the signs of the ending of past depressions was the launching of new business ventures. It is true that most of them were small. Altogether, however, they provided work for many millions of people. In the present depression this demand for work has not yet appeared. Few new ventures have been started. Why? Because the small business man, the working man who would like to become his own boss—the average American—has hesitated to start out for himself. He lacks confidence in the soundness of Federal policy; he is afraid of what may come next.

We must dispel his fear, restore his confidence and place our reliance once more in the initiative, intelligence and courage of these makers of jobs and opportunities. That is why I say, in all earnestness, that the time has come to unshackle initiative and free the spirit of American enterprise.

We must be freed from incessant governmental intimidation and hostility. We must be freed from excessive expenditures and crippling taxation. We must be freed from the effects of an arbitrary and uncertain monetary policy. And through a vigorous enforcement of the anti-trust laws we must be freed from private monopolistic control.

Once these things are done, the energies of the American economic system will remedy the ravages of depression and restore full activity and full employment.

Out of this depression has come not only the problem of recovery but also the equally grave problem of caring for the unemployed until recovery is attained. Their relief at all times is a matter of plain duty.

We of our party pledge that this obligation will never be neglected. In extending help, however, we will handle the public funds as a public trust. We will recognize that all citizens, irrespective of color, race, creed or party affiliation, have an equal right to this protection. We would consider it base beyond words to make loyalty or service to party a condition upon which the needy unemployed might obtain help. Those who use public funds to build their political machines forfeit all right to political consideration from true Americans.

Relief Is Pledged

Let me emphasize that while we propose to follow a policy of economy in government expenditures those who need relief will get it. We will not take our economies out of the allotments to the unemployed. We will take them out of the hides of the political exploiters. The question is not—as stated by the administration—how much money the American people are willing to spend for relief. The question is how much waste the American people are willing to stand for in the administration of relief.

The destruction of human values by this depression has been far greater than the American people suffered during the World War. When the depression began millions of dependable men and women had employment. They were the solid citizenry of America; they had lived honestly and had worked hard. They had dealt fairly with the government, which, in turn, had depended upon their support.

Then they found themselves deprived of employment by economic forces over which they had no control. Little by little they spent their life savings while vainly seeking new jobs.

We shall undertake to aid these innocent victims of the depression.

In addition we shall amend the Social Security Act to make it workable. We recognize that society, acting through government, must afford as large a measure of protection as it can against involuntary unemployment and dependency in old age. We pledge that the federal government will do its proper share in that task.

But it must be kept in mind that the security of all of us depends on the good management of our common affairs. We must be able to produce and accumulate enough to finance our normal progress, as well as to take care of ourselves and of those entitled to protection.

Mountaing debts and increasing taxes constitute a threat to all of these aims. They absorb the funds that might be used to create new things or to reduce the cost of present goods. Taxes, both visible and invisible, add to the price of everything. By taking more and more out of the family purse they leave less for the family security. Let us not be misled by those who tell us that others will be made to carry the burden for us. A simple inquiry into the facts and figures will show that our growing debts and taxes are so enormous that, even if we tax to the utmost limits those who are best able to pay, the average taxpayer will still have to bear the major part. While spending billions of dollars of borrowed money may create a temporary appearance of prosperity, we and our children, as taxpayers, have yet to pay the bill. For every single dollar spent we will pay back two dollars!

Crushing Debts Retard Prosperity.

Crushing debts and taxes are usually incurred, as they are being incurred today, under the guise of helping people—the same people who must finally pay them. They invariably retard prosperity and they sometimes lead to situations in which the rights of the people are destroyed. This is the lesson of history and we have seen it occur in the modern world.

Our party holds nothing to be of more urgent importance than putting our financial house in order. For the good of all of us, we must re-establish responsibility in the handling of government finances. We must recognize that a government does not have an unlimited supply of money to spend. It must husband its resources just as truly as does the head of a family. Unless it follows such a course it cannot afford the services which the people themselves expect.

No sound national policy looking to the national welfare will neglect the farmer. This is not because the farmer needs or wishes to be coddled, or that he asks for undue help. It is necessary because the needs of a great nation require that its food producers shall always stand upon a social and economic plane in keeping with the national importance of their service.

The present administration's efforts to produce this result have not been successful. Payments under the triple-A did help to tide farmers over a difficult period. But even before it was ruled out by the Supreme Court, the triple-A was rapidly disorganizing American agriculture. Some of its worst effects continue. By its policies the administration has taken the American farmer out of foreign markets and put the foreign farmer into the American market. The loss of markets, both at home and abroad, far outweighs the value of all the benefits paid to farmers.

Worse than this, from the standpoint of the public, is the fact that the administration, through its program of scarcity, has gambled with the needed food and feed supplies of the country. It overlooked the fact that mother nature cannot be regimented.

The time has now come when we must replace this futile program with one that is economically and socially right.

The wealth of our soil must be preserved. We shall establish effective soil conservation and erosion control policies in connection with a national land use and flood-prevention program—and keep it all out of politics.

Our farmers are entitled to all of the home market they can supply without injustice to the consumer. We propose a policy that protects them in this right.

To "Cushion" Farmers

Some of our farmers, dependent in part upon foreign markets, suffer from disadvantages arising from world disorder. Until these disadvantages are eliminated we propose to pay cash benefits in order to cushion our farm families against the disastrous effects of price fluctuations and to protect their standard of living.

The American people, now as always, are responsive to distress caused by disasters, such as the present drouth. Our platform reflects that spirit. We shall fulfill its pledge to give every reasonable assistance to producers in areas suffering from such temporary afflictions, so that they may again get on a self-supporting basis.

Our farm program as a whole will be made to serve a vital national purpose.

The family type of farm has long constituted one of the cherished foundations of our social strength. It represents human values that we must not lose. Widespread ownership of moderate-sized tracts of land was the aim of the Republican Homestead Act. This conception of agriculture is one phase of the general principle that we stand for—preserving freedom of opportunity in all walks of life.

The benefits which will be paid under our program will go no higher than the production level of the family type of farm.

Another matter of deep concern is the welfare of American labor. The general well-being of our country requires that labor shall have the position and rewards of prosperity to which it is entitled. I firmly believe that labor has the right to protect this position and to achieve those rewards by organizing in labor unions. Surely the history of labor in the United States has demonstrated that working conditions, wages and hours have been improved through self-organization.

The right of labor to organize means to me the right of employes to join any type of union they prefer, whether it covers their plant, their craft or their industry. It means that, in the absence of a union contract, an employe has an equal right to join a union or to refuse to join a union.

Under all circumstances, so states the Republican platform, employes are to be free from interference from any source, which means, as I read it, entire freedom from coercion or intimidation by the employer, any fellow-employe or any other person.

Holds Government Should Be Umpire

The government must maintain itself in the position of an umpire: First, to protect the public interest, and, second, to act as a mediator between conflicting groups. One of the greatest problems of the country is to develop effective methods of conciliation.

Taking a dispute, after it gets into a tangle, and rushing it to the doorstep of the President is a bad way to handle a labor situation or any other situation.

In international affairs also the Republican party has always worked for the advancement of justice and peace. Following the early tradition of our country, it has consistently urged the adjustment of international disputes in accordance with law, equity and justice. We have now again declared our continual loyalty to this principle.

Republican Presidents sent delegates to the Hague conferences and one of them took the leading part in the termination of the Russo-Japanese War. Another Republican President called a conference which for the first time produced a reduction and limitation of arms on a wide scale. Still another led in securing the treaty outlawing wars.

In purpose and achievement our party has a record which points the way to further helpful service in creating international understanding, in removing the causes of war and in reducing and limiting arms.

We shall take every opportunity to promote among the nations a peace based upon justice and human rights. We shall join in no plan that would take from us that independence of judgment which has made the United States a power for good in the world. We shall join in no plan that might involve us in a war in the beginning of which we had no part, or that would build a false peace on the foundation of armed camps.

I turn now to the basic principles upon which our nation is founded. America has always stood, and now stands, first of all for human rights, for "the life, liberty and pursuit of happiness" of the great Declaration. The prime needs of men have not changed since that Declaration, though new means from time to time may be necessary to meet those needs. But the great safeguards against tyranny and oppression must not be cast away and lost. They must be saved that men may live free to pursue their happiness, safe from any kind of exploitation.

"Personal Government" Illegal

One cannot face this occasion and the prospect flowing from it without a sobering reflection upon the beginnings, growth, and destiny of our nation. Our government was founded to give life to certain vital principles. The people embodied these basic principles of human rights in the federal and state Constitutions. Thus, the people themselves, of their own free will, set up this government. And it is still the government of the people. Any change which the people want they can have by following the procedure they themselves laid down.

But for any official or branch of government to attempt such a change, without authority from the people, is to do an unwarranted and illegal act. It is a substitution of personal for constitutional government. If added power is needed, the people have set out how that authority may be had from them if they wish to give it.

This, in its broad essentials, is the basic structure of our government.

As our economic life has become more complex and specialized some need, real or apparent, has often been urged as an excuse for a further grant of power from the people. They have sometimes given, sometimes withheld, the desired power.

There has now appeared in high places, however, a new and dangerous impulse. This is the impulse to take away and lodge in the Chief Executive, without the people's consent, the powers which they have kept in their state governments or which they have reserved in themselves.

In its ultimate effect upon the welfare of the whole people, this, then, is the most important question now before us: Shall we continue to delegate more and more power to the Chief Executive or do we desire to preserve the American form of government? Shall we continue to recognize that certain rights reside with the people, that certain powers are reserved for the states, and that certain functions are delegated to the federal government?

Now I know that many of us, at one time or another, have become dissatisfied and impatient with the efforts of our local and state administrations to solve our difficulties.

At such times it has seemed to us that only a larger, more powerful unit of government could meet the need.

Experience On Centralization

For those who have followed such a line of reasoning I have the understanding that comes from experience. As a young man I was attracted to the idea of centralizing in the Federal government full power to correct the abuses growing out of a more complex social order. When the people rejected this alternative, I was as disappointed as any one. But in spite of this rejection, I have lived to see many of those abuses substantially corrected by the forty-eight State Legislatures in their fields and by the Federal government in its field of interstate commmerce.

More recently, as a small independent oil producer, I saw my industry ask for Federal regulation because of a selfish exploitation of a natural resource, which, once wasted, cannot be replaced. When Federal regulation failed, the industry made progress in the solution of the problem by turning to state action, supplemented with interstate compacts as provided by the amazing foresight of the makers of the Constitution.

It is not my belief that the Constitution is above change. Hhe people have the right, by the means they have prescribed, to change their form of government to fit their wishes. If they could not do this, they would not be free. But change must come by and through the people and not by usurpation. Changes should come openly, after full and free discussion, and after full opportunity for the people to express their will.

The Republican party, however, does not believe that the people wish to abandon the American form of government.

We propose to maintain the constitutional balance of power between the states and the Federal government.

We propose to use the full power of the Federal government to break up private monopolies and to eliminate private monopolistic practices.

In other words, the Republican party proposes to restore and to maintain a free competitive system—a system under which, and only under which, can there be independence, equality of opportunity, and work for all.

A free competitive system is necessary to a free government. Neither political nor civil liberty long survives the loss of economic liberty. Each and all of these liberties, with the precious human rights which they involve, must be preserved intact and inviolate.

If I am elected Chief Executive of this nation I propose to restore our government to an efficient as well as constitutional basis.

I shall call to my aid those men best qualified to conduct the public business—and I mean just that.

I shall stand back of them.

I shall hold them responsible for doing their jobs.

I shall cooperate whole-heartedly with Congress in an effective reorganization of the numerous government agencies, to get rid of those that are not necessary, to eliminate duplication, to insure better administration, and to save the taxpayers' money.

I hold that it is the right of our people to have their greatest public service enterprise — their government—well administered.

Faith in Human Freedom

These are some of the aims and proposals of a Republican administration that would enter office under a pledge to conduct the public business with honesty, frugality, courage and common sense.

In common with all my countrymen, I look forward to the America that is to be.

It should be a nation in which the old, wrong things are going out and the new, right things are coming in.

It should be a country which produces more and more until there is plenty for all, with a fair chance for all to earn their share.

It should be a land in which equal opportunity shall prevail and special privilege shall have no place.

It should be an America that shall bring to bear the whole of her great spiritual force in a common effort to drive the curse of war from the earth; an America that, for the sake of all mankind as well as ourselves, shall never lose the faith that human freedom is a practical ideal.

It is in these aims and in these works that I vision the manifest destiny of America. Everything we need for their realization we can find. I firmly believe, within the principles under which this nation has grown to greatness. God grant us, one and all, the strength and the wisdom to do our part in bringing these things to pass.

CONSTIPATION* MAY SLOW YOU DOWN

Correct It by Eating the Right Meals

The most common type of constipation is due to insufficient "bulk" in the diet. When you continue to eat poorly balanced meals, over a period of weeks and months, faulty elimination often develops. You feel uncomfortable, lack your accustomed vigor.

Eat a balanced diet. Include milk, fruits and vegetables as protective foods. Also sufficient "bulk." Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a convenient source of "bulk." Within the body, it absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the intestinal tract.

Fruits and vegetables contain some "bulk," of course. But scientific tests show that, with certain people, this "bulk" is largely broken down within the body. This does not happen to the same extent with bran. When you eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, you can be sure of obtaining effective "bulk."

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, breads, etc. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company as a natural laxative food for constipation.* Eat it regularly for regularity. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

McMahon Remanded To Jail for One Week

London, July 24 (AP)—George Andrew McMahon, bald Briton who drew a revolver at King Edward's military parade, was remanded to jail for a week today after a hearing on a charge of producing a weapon "with intent to alarm his majesty".

The decision to grant a remand pending continuance of the hearing next Friday was made after Alfred Kerstein, counsel for the prisoner, had announced McMahon wished to testify himself and to call witnesses

Sitting in the grimy Bow Street police station courtroom in the heart of Covent Garden Market, the sharp-nosed McMahon heard Special Constable Anthony Gordon Dick tell how he smashed at the prisoner's pistol hand when King Edward rode by on Constitution Hill eight days ago.

Wendel Appears Before Federal Jury

Newark, N. J., July 24 (AP)—Paul H. Wendel, former Trenton attorney, went before the Federal grand jury today to tell his bizarre story of abduction and torture by which he said he was forced to make a false confession to the Lindbergh kidnaping.

He was the first witness as the grand jury opened its investigation of the strange sequel to the Lindbergh-Hauptmann case.

The Newark News said Wendel was prepared to tell "a sensational story" of a conference in a Brooklyn hotel involving disclosures by Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Wendel also had with him, the News said, a copy of an alleged letter which he claims was sent by Governor Hoffman to Ellis H. Parker on February 28 while Wendel was being held at the New Lisbon Colony for feeble minded males.

Governor Hoffman has said he was not aware of Wendel's detention or confession until the week-end of March 28 when Wendel was turned over to Mercer county authorities by Parker.

The Brooklyn hotel conference, the News quoted Wendel as saying, was a meeting of a number of men, several of whom were friendly to Hauptmann. During the conference, Wendel said, according to the News, disclosures were made which were revealed before by Hauptmann regarding his guilt in the Lindbergh case.

Hedrick's Make It Four Straight, Rout Grunenwald's By 16-2 Score

Hedrick's Brewers made it four straight last night at the Athletic Field when they smothered the Grunenwalds by 16-2 in a slugfest that saw three of Charlie Diers' pitchers smacked around.

Mahar, Scherer and Davis took a turn on the slab for the Grunenwalds. All were treated unceremoniously and were nicked for a collection of 16 hits. Joe Brown, the Hedrick speedball artist and leading league hurler, subdued the Home Leaders with five hits.

The "crucial" game was turned into a rout in the very first inning when the winners started their bombardment with a five run assault. Grunenwalds averted a shutout by garnering two runs in the third. The Brewers continued their batting spree in the third, fourth and fifth to score 11 more runs.

Francello, Van Etten and Quest led the parade for the Hedricks with three hits each while Murphy and Komosa scored two.

Ambers Is Confident of Victory In His Fight with Tony Canzoneri

"Upsets are rather fashionable in the fight game this season," said Lou Ambers, the Herkimer lightweight, yesterday as he finished training with a brace of spar mates at Dr. Bier's camp, in Pompton Lakes, N. J., where the clever young fighter is making ready for his fifteen round bout against Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champ, at the Madison Square Garden Bowl in Long Island City, on August 6, "and I think I ought to notify Mr. Canzoneri that he had better prepare for the biggest upset ever suffered in his life.

"I'm going to lick Canzoneri on the night of August 6. Not alone am I going to beat him, but I'm going to stop him," the spunky challenger added. "Tony has said a lot of mean things about me, but I'll get even with him when we get in there for the championship. He licked the worn out Jimmy McLarnin and he knows he will not have such a soft assignment this time.

"Of course, Canzoneri will be a hot favorite to beat me, but don't forget Joe Louis was a 100 to 1 shot to beat Schmeling and you know what happened. Sixto Escobar, the bantam champion, was an odds favorite the other night to beat Indian Quintana, but the latter nearly knocked his brains out. It will be Tony Canzoneri's turn next and I mean it when I say that you are listening in on the next lightweight champion of the world."

Several new sparring partners were added to Ambers's stable yesterday. They include Carl Guggino, the hard-hitting lightweight from Tampa, and Johnny Horstman, from Brooklyn. Marty Pomerantz, another clever Brooklynite, also enlisted for the rough work which Lou will indulge in every day until the day of the fight.

In the meanwhile Canzoneri is hard at work on his Marlborough farm, apparently not worrying about the outcome of his fight with the Herkimer Hurricane. Lou Camps, Victor Vallee and Red Cochran have joined the training squad which is being handled by the veteran trainer, Nick Florio.

Mike Belloise, the featherweight champion, is all set to meet a suitable opponent on the same card, in the event that Dave Crowley, the English fighter, cannot keep his engagement.

Coxsackie Defeated Local Shooters by 13 Points on Thursday

Thursday evening at the indoor range of the Kingston Rifle and Pistol Club in the Municipal Auditorium, a pistol shoot was held between Coxsackie and Kingston. Coxsackie took the match by 13 points. A return match will be shot at Coxsackie in the near future. At the conclusion of the match refreshments were served by the local club.

Stanton Brewers at Kristic Field Sunday

The Stanton Brewers will travel to Rosendale Sunday, for a game with the Rosendale team on Kristic Field.

Ky Embree will do the pitching for the Stantons, with Jim McElrath behind the bat. Battery for Rosendale will be Dewey Van Buren and Hank Yonetti.

Berardi A. C. Will Play at Margaretville

The Berardi A. C. will travel up to Margaretville to cross bats with the team from the mountain town on Sunday afternoon. Jack Dodge will hurl for the Kingston team while Earl Evans will probably get the call for Margaretville.

SPORT SLANTS by Pap

Jack Winsett, slugging Columbus Red Bird outfielder, is aiming at the American association home run mark of 69 established by Joe Hauser of Minneapolis. Winsett has been hitting at a .385 clip. At the midway mark he had 33 home runs to his credit.

Winsett's determined drive for home run and batting honors may not result in the record he aspires to create but one thing is very likely—he probably will get another try in the majors.

The lean, loose-jointed outfielder was up with the Boston Red Sox in 1931-'31. He was returned to the minors when he failed to show anything at the plate. The Cardinals picked him up for a trial on the strength of his showing with Rochester but soon turned him out to Columbus. He pounded the ball well enough last year with the Red Birds, showing a season average of 348.

Even that fat average failed to win him another chance, because he had become known as a weak hitter against southpaw pitching. Batting from the first-base side of the plate he was woefully weak against southpaws. His average was almost entirely the result of hitting against right-handers.

When forced to stay in against all kinds of pitching this spring the southern lad suddenly began hitting all varieties of twirling. He hit in 26 consecutive games—a feat which pushed him to the top of the league's hitters.

Dodgers Get Recruit

The Brooklyn Dodgers gained possession of a promising young outfielder when they turned over the veteran George Earnshaw to the St. Louis Cardinals. Eddie Morgan is the lad and he is now playing the outfield for the Columbus Red Birds. He will report to the Dodgers next spring. Morgan had a trial with the Cards early this season, and in his first time at the plate against major league pitching punched out a home run. The Cardinals decided the youngster needed additional seasoning, so they sent him on to Columbus.

When the Detroit Tigers decided they needed an experienced catcher to help out during the absence of Micky Cochrane they dug up old Glenn Myatt. Myatt certainly has plenty of experience to recommend him.

Glenn must be nearly 40. He has been around a long, long time and should know all the answers. 'Way back in 1919 he had a trial with the Athletics but did not linger long for Connie Mack had as his first string catcher Cy Perkins, today a Detroit coach. After a stay in Milwaukee Myatt came back into the American League with the Cleveland Indians. He stayed with Cleveland until 1934 when Walter Johnson released him on the grounds that he had passed his peak. There was quite a furore at the time and a short while later Johnson was replaced by Steve O'Neill.

Saugerties Nine Will Meet Brewers Tonight

The Hedrick Brewers will cross bats with Tymeson's All Stars from Saugerties tonight at the Athletic Field. Game time is 6:15 sharp. Manager DeCicco has not announced his battery as yet but it is expected that Ed Murphy will get the call.

The Saugerties team will be made up of players from the Saugerties A. C. and the All Stars. The team that will show here tonight recently defeated Stamford 6-2. Their starting hurler has not been announced but Manager Tymeson has Dave Bell, Frankie Bruno and Joe Buytkins.

The Brewers, who are at present leading the City League, will use their regular lineup.

Named To Carry Baton In Olympic Sprint Relay

THIS DASHING QUARTET is assigned to defend the 400-meter relay title for the United States at the Olympic Games in Berlin. Left to right the relay sprinters are Sam Stoller, University of Michigan ace from Cincinnati, Mack Robinson, Pasadena (Calif.) Junior college; Marty Glickman, Syracuse star now running for the Grand Street Boys' Association, New York, and Foy Draper, University of Southern California. Four years ago at Los Angeles, the U. S. Olympic relay four, composed of Robert Kiesel, Emmett Toppino, Hector Dyer and Frank Wykoff, established a world record of 40 seconds flat.

Yankees Smother Browns 15-3; Giants Lose, Drop to 4th Place

(By The Associated Press.)

If the surging Cleveland Indians catch the Yankees in the current American League pennant chase—and that seems a lot more likely today that it did two weeks ago—the man who picked the moment for announcing Steve O'Neill's re-appointment as manager of the tribe can take a large share of the credit.

That announcement, timed as it was to hit the Indians at their lowest ebb, will go down in the books as the smartest psychological move of the season—the spark that set off the tribe's dynamite drive in the American League.

Always popular with the players, O'Neill's re-signing reacted as a bombshell to an apparently listless outfit, gave them something to fight for, and bounced the club right back into the picture.

Up to that time, the Indians were playing a shade over .500 ball, lacking the pep necessary to make a fight for the pennant in any league. Since then, they've taken 11 of 14 starts, have shown the hitting and pitching that made the experts pick them as potential pennant timber for the last two years, and have shot from fifth to second place, cutting the Yanks' lead to eight games.

They lost only their second start in 12 days yesterday, dropping a 9-8 decision to the Boston Red Sox, but only after a powerful uphill climb that saw them come from behind a 9-2 handicap to all but tie.

The Yankees, meantime, finally solved the pitching of the lowly St. Louis Browns with an 18-hit attack and ended their longest losing streak of the year at three games with a 15-3 victory. Joe DiMaggio, who has snapped out of his hitting doldrums since the start of the current western tour, belted two homers as Monte Pearson chalked up his 13th pitching victory.

Schoolboy Rowe turned in another fine pitching performance to give the Tigers a 2-0 victory over the Athletics, and enable the world's champions to hold onto third place, despite the 7-6 triumph of the White Sox over the Senators.

The Cubs' National League lead was shortened to two games as the Brooklyn Dodgers shoved over a run in the last of the ninth to clip the pennant defenders 6-5. The Cardinals, beaten twice in a row by the Giants, turned on the heat and came through with a 4-2 decision to drop the New Yorkers back to fourth place.

Regaining the third spot were the Pirates, who slugged behind Cy Blanton's six-hit pitching and trounced the Phillies 10-1. The Reds slipped into the second division again, falling 4-0 before the Bees and the five-hit pitching of Old Bob Smith.

Rearrangements at Skeet Club Comply With Official Rules

The Skeet field at the Ulster County Gun Club has been rearranged to comply to the new rules. The principal change was to make the targets from each trap house cross at a point six yards beyond Station 8 instead of directly over Station 8.

Stations 1, 7 and 8 remain as before but the other stations are moved up 21 yards from the new crossing point.

This makes all the angles of flight of the targets very different from the original layout. The new layout is optional now but will be required after September 1 for all official shoots and records.

Ten members of the club tried out the new layout and rules Thursday and although a strong wind made the targets very erratic good scores were made under the new conditions.

It was the opinion of all the shooters that the change makes skeet more interesting and better practice for game shooting.

Only Scattered Rains In State and Crops Given Little Relief

(By The Associated Press)

Scattered rains were reported in upstate New York during the last 24 hours but farm crops generally obtained little relief from a drouth now in its 13th week in the central state area.

A federal-state report said that all except the northern New York area suffered serious consequences of the drouth and heat which has resulted in a water shortage in some sections.

No serious shortage of drinking supplies was reported in any part of the state, however, although several communities advised residents to restrict the use of water for sprinkling.

Most crops, with the exception of grapes and corn were reported seriously affected. Some farmers in the Utica area plowed under peas because of their poor condition.

Mrs. Frances M. Graham, of the Cattaraugus Farm Bureau, said the potato crop in that county was the smallest in seventy years, with the exception of 1925. Pea and bean crops are virtually ruined, she added.

Parched fields have been reflected in reduced milk production. Representative Bert Lord, Republican, of Afton, asked the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation yesterday for surplus grains to help farmers maintain their herds. He said a survey showed that hay and grain crops have been reduced in some cases as low as 30 per cent.

The Dolgeville village board was informed that nearly 50,000 white pine trees set out in the village watershed early in the summer have perished.

Fruit growers said that much of the damage to their crops was caused by late frosts. The Utica Observer Dispatch said that a survey in the central New York area showed that "fruit crops will be almost a total failure as a result of late frosts."

Lorient, France, July 24 (AP)—The French Cruiser Emile Bertin and two destroyers, the Adroit and the Basque, returned from sea maneuvers today, refueling for swift voyages to Spain to aid French nationals. The cruiser was ordered to San Sebastian where the Destroyer Indomitable already has dropped anchor. The Adroit and Basque were directed to proceed to Seville.

Sheriff Still Looks For Major Arrest

Asheville, N. C., July 24 (AP)—Sheriff Laurence E. Brown reiterated today he expected to arrest "at any moment now" the man he suspects as the slayer of Helen Clevenger, 18-year-old New York University student found dead in her room at a fashionable hotel eight days ago.

Brown made it plain the suspect is not one of the three persons detained for questioning, but he declined to discuss the identity of the person he believes was the actual killer—"a particular person known to me."

Brown promised Wednesday night he would seize the man "within 48 hours." That would place the arrest by 7 o'clock tonight and today he said, "I'll stick by the 7 p. m., deadline."

Brown said Prof. W. L. Clevenger, 54-year-old uncle of the slain girl, was expected to return to Asheville today to aid in the investigation.

He went there to attend his niece's funeral.

The three still detained in the investigation are: Mark Wollner, concert violinist; Daniel Gaddy, 28-year-old hotel night watchman, and L. D. Roddy, 25, negro bellhop.

The sheriff released Miss Mildred Ward, 19-year-old daughter of Wollner's landlady, who corroborated the musician's statement he was at home the night of the assault-slaying.

"I became convinced she had finally told me a straight story," the sheriff said.

Miss Ward said later she had stuck to her original statement.

The sheriff, declining to say why he continued to hold the three others, said he questioned Gaddy again last night. He announced afterward: "Gaddy's memory is getting much better."

"I do not suspect Gady of any direct connection with the crime," "but he knows something, and he's getting ready to talk."

BITTER VOTING 40 YEARS, FINDS HES NOT CITIZEN

Honolulu, T. H. (AP)—After enjoying the advantages of fulfilling the duties of American citizenship for some 40 years, including office holding, voting and jury service, James Graham Placidus Morgan Honolulu businessman, has discovered he is not an American citizen.

A native of Wales, he believed his father had been naturalized. Finding this was not the case, he has applied for derivative citizenship.

Since the establishment in 1910 of the Harriman and Bear Mountain sections of the Palisades Interstate Park, there has been a notable increase in the number of lakes and ponds. AT SUMMER THEATRES

"Co-Respondent Unknown", a comedy in three acts, was presented by Robert Elwyn at the Maverick Theatre, Woodstock, last evening with the following cast:

Martin.....Frank Rothe
Sylvia.....Velma Royton
Bessie.....Betty Sittler
Vinny (Vincent Cummings).....Robert Benton
Pete (Pierre Edney).....George Makinson
Donald.....Walter Pick
Jessica.....Phyllis Ellerman
Claire.....Harriott Marshall
Murray Carson....Duane MacKynne
Hattie.....Betty MacDonald
Walter.....Robin Batcheller

The laws regulating divorce in New York state, with the stringent necessity of using adultery as the only means of breaking the marital bonds, was turned into as neat a satire as one could seek at Robert Elwyn's Maverick Playhouse last night, and the Harris-Goldman play that had New York city in stitches during the drama season, was handled with skill, dexterity and humor by a Maverick cast which seems to improve with each week's performance. Despite the really fine work of the entire company, the audience took the work of Betty MacDonald to its collective heart last night for Miss MacDonald went to town in a characterization as cleverly done as anything seen at the Maverick this season. As Hattie, the young lady who made it possible for the divorce seeking Martin Bishop to find himself in a compromising position, Miss MacDonald lived her lines with a zestful and satisfying exuberance.

The play concerns itself with the domestic woes of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bishop. He (Frank Rothe) is a writer of serious books on economics and she (Velma Royton) is an actress immersed in play producing and acting. Both have their work and neither has the time or patience to make a study of success in marriage. A divorce seems to be the only solution and when the play opens, they are waiting the arrival of Murray Carson, their Hebrew lawyer. Mr. Carson arrives like a gust of wind and tells them the idea of divorce is stupid but the two stick to their guns. The lawyer explains that divorce in New York state is difficult to procure, that the man in the case must be found by witnesses in his room with an unclothed lady stretched out in bed as living proof of the husband's unfaithfulness. And the big problem is to see that there is no possible stigma of collusion about the case.

So the affair goes through as planned but Martin Bishop is a bit perturbed in his apartment on the night of the event, for he has no idea who the woman is to be. She arrives and after a moment of joint embarrassment, he discovers his co-respondent to be a young girl without any previous experience in such matters and taking the job as a favor to an interested party in the case. They grow to like each other while waiting for the witnesses to appear and Mr. Martin falls under the spell of the quaint, fun loving little girl who is a good enough sport to go through with a thing obviously unsavory. She not only goes through with it, she cooperates to the superlative degree. For after the witnesses have departed the scene, she stays the night on Mr. Martin's insistence. What complications that causes and how the play terminates is briskly enjoyable.

Duane MacKynne, in the role of the nervous, hand waving lawyer, stamped himself as an actor of exceptional talent. Since his arrival at the Maverick this season, Mr. MacKynne has played a variety of parts and has been excellent in each type of character he portrays. It isn't difficult to see that he is definitely on the way up in the world of the theatre. Frank Rothe, as usual, gave another smooth and polished performance and the work of Velma Royton, Harriott Marshall and Robert Benton was correspondingly good. "Co-respondent Unknown" will continue to please audiences tonight, Saturday and Sunday with the curtain at 8:45.

Stone Age People Of Papua Cultivate The Sweet Potato

Honolulu, T. H., (AP).—An isolated people, who live in the interior of Papua and are still in the stone age as far as their implements go, were discussed by F. E. Williams, U. S. government anthropologist of the territory of Papua, on his arrival here from the South Pacific.

Williams recently flew over the section of mandated New Guinea and the territory of Papua in which explorers three years ago discovered a group previously unknown to the outside world.

It is a beautiful country of great valleys and rolling open land lighty timbered, Williams said. The people live principally on sweet potatoes, cultivating them in neatly laid out little gardens, and make their homes in scattered farmsteads.

Williams made the trip with Jack Hides, who discovered the people with Ivan Champion, another explorer who plans further studies this year in the far-away district.

Hides described the people as "typical Papuans—dark, fine-looking fellows who carry excellent stone axes."

UNUSUAL CAMEL FOSSIL MOUNTED IN OKLAHOMA

Norman, Okla., (AP.—The fossil of a prehistoric camel, a rare find in Oklahoma, soon will join other remains in the museum of paleontology at the University of Oklahoma.

First discovered in Roger Mills county near Cheyenne, Okla., three years ago, the bones of the huge camel were carefully transported to the state university's department of paleontology here. J. Willis Stovall, director of the museum, has nearly restored it.

"Camels were rare in Oklahoma," said Ralph B. Shead, of the paleontology project, "and this specimen is the most complete of any yet found."

NATIONAL FOOD-SAFETY CHECK-UP

IS YOUR REFRIGERATOR COLD ENOUGH?

50° IS THE DANGER LINE!

● If the temperature of your refrigerator is below 50 degrees, you're safe. Above 50, you are risking serious illness — and losing money on food. You can't depend on sight, smell or taste to tell you whether food is all right. The one sure way to find out is to check up on your refrigerator — "take its temperature." The Cold-Gauge is not an ordinary thermometer, but a special instrument designed expressly to check refrigerator temperatures. Get yours at once, while the supply lasts. Free to adults. No cost, no obligation.
